

DEATH LIST IN TODAY'S WRECK

May Reach Twenty-Five--Two Trains Met In Head On Collision This Morning.

COMMISSION CAR WAS TELESKOPED

Reports Say That Entire Train Left The Track--The Wrecked Cars Are Burning With Many Injured Inside Them.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Chicago, Jan. 19.—The "Queen City" special on the Big Four railroad collided head on with a westbound freight at Plover, Ind., at 2:30 this morning, while the passenger train was running fifty miles an hour.
Driven Through Car
The force of the collision was so great that the tender of the passenger engine was driven the entire length of the combination car in which a number of passengers sleeping were hurt.
Catches Fire
Soon after the collision the wreckage caught fire from the engine coals and all the coaches except a private car of Vice President Schaff were destroyed. The dead and injured were taken to Kankakee. It is reported, however, that twenty were cremated.
The Details
Kankakee, Ill., Jan. 19.—Seven survivors of the Big Four wreck at Plover were brought here in the private car of Vice President Schaff, the only car on the train not burned.
Raises List
It is said possibly twenty-five persons were burned in the wreck. Only five were rescued. The conductor and baggage man of the passenger train are missing.
Known Dead
A partial list of the dead is: Conductor Whitaker; J. M. McKee, baggage man; John Schannon, Williamsport, Ind.; and Henry Outcalt, fireman.
Later Reports
The later reports state the Pullman cars with the exception of the vice president's car, did not turn over but left the track and were burned after the passengers had been taken out. The number of injured will be forty.
Official Report
Lafayette, Ind., Jan. 19.—The official report issued by the Big Four says thirteen people were in the combination car and only four are accounted for. No one was injured in the sleepers.

BREAK NEW HORSE WITHOUT THE WHIP

"Kindness Methods" Used on Magnificent Animal Purchased for Fire Department.
Having secured an order from the common council to dispose of the aged gray team used on the truck at the west side fire station and to purchase animals to replace them, Chief H. C. Klein has secured a magnificent bay gelding to take old "Dan's" place. The horse is five years old, seven years old and weighs 1555 pounds, just five pounds less than its predecessor. It was raised in California, Wis., and came from there yesterday afternoon. This afternoon William Conroy and Arthur Ott set to work breaking the animal to the fire service. For the first time in the history of the local department the whip was not used, "kindness methods" having come into favor. The horse proved exceedingly intelligent, learning to run under the harness in five minutes' time. Considerable time was spent in making it accustomed to the dropping of the harness, the coming of the firemen down the brass pole and similar movements of an alarm response that might frighten a new horse.

NEWS FROM KINGSTON HAS BEEN VERY MUCH DELAYED

Break In Communication Has Done Much To Increase The Anxiety Over The Real Truths.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, Jan. 19.—News from Kingston is still filtering in very slowly 24 hours late, but the worst is now apparently known. The town itself is a wreck. The very few houses standing remain inhabitable. The populace is living in the open. Food and medical supplies continue to be scarce, but relief ships are hurrying to the stricken city from many quarters. The dead list will probably be about 700 and the seriously injured about 1000 and the number five hundred. Many others of the injured are being cared for at temporary homes. A cable error.
No Americans were killed as a result of the disaster. A number of tourists have taken refuge on the American warships.
London, Jan. 19.—A dispatch from Kingston to the Evening News under today's date, says: "An official report has just issued which states that over 700 bodies have been buried at Kingston, and the remains of 1017 other victims have been identified and that a large number are still missing. There is no confirmation that this in the hospital number five hundred. It is believed the figures '1017' are a cable error."

FREAR'S EYES NOT STRONG ENOUGH FOR THE LABORS

Secures Doctor's Certificate To This Effect
In Dispute With Beedle.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Jan. 19.—Two distinguished reformers of Wisconsin, who fought strenuously with "Bob" La Follette and helped to press his measures through the legislature, having now come to occupy state offices, are fiercely quarreling over so small a detail as to whether the secretary of state shall use his personal pen or the hand of a subordinate clerk in the signing of thousands of warrants that pass through the department. Secretary of State James A. Frear of Hudson is combating State Treasurer A. H. Dahl of Westby. The treasurer will not honor warrants from the secretary of state. The state department head says this work is beneath him or that he does not want to do it for fear of impairing his eyesight. Meantime, employees of the state are "standing off" their creditors and straining their landlords' patience because they are unable to get their week-overdue pay from the state. The answer to this administrative puzzle is that Secretary Frear appointed L. B. Nagler, a fellow republican from Hudson, as chief clerk, making a temporary appointment which in due time will become permanent. Treasurer Dahl is said to take this as a slap at Dahl's friend, ex-Secretary of State Houser, who desired to fill the vacancy by promoting the other clerks in the department, and therefore Dahl is determined that no warrant shall be paid unless the secretary signs it in person. The treasurer also refuses to recognize the authority of Nagler to act as chief clerk, claiming his appointment to be contrary to the civil service law. The matter was put up to Attorney General Gilbert, who in an exhaustive opinion held that Secretary Frear would have to personally sign the warrant, adding, "unless physically incapacitated from so doing." Thereupon Secretary Frear filed documentary evidence that he is "physically incapacitated." He secured a statement signed by an eye specialist, declaring that to sign all those warrants would so tax the eyes of the secretary of state as to impair the sight permanently. But this is not satisfactory to Treasurer Dahl and the matter has been put up to the attorney general again. It seems as though about half the people around the vicinities of the capital are swearing over the scrap. They have money coming from the state and can't get it. The other half are laughing.

..Forty Years Ago..

Janesville Daily Gazette, Saturday, January 19, 1877.—Pulling Them Down.—Workmen have been busy today in pulling down the remaining walls of the Hyatt House. We are glad to see it as serious accidents were imminent as long as they were left standing.

Religious Notices.—The funeral services of Maggie Emerson (who lost her life at the burning of the Hyatt House) will be held at Lippin's Hall tomorrow at 10 o'clock a. m. The Baptist Sabbath School will meet at the same place at 12 m. Preyer meeting at 6 p. m. and preaching at 7 p. m.

An Award of Prizes.—Prof. Pierce having determined to award prizes to those of his scholars who were the best writers and had made the greatest improvement in the course of the term, selected a committee consisting of C. C. Keeler, Charles E. Church and J. H. Balch to decide the matter. After careful examination the committee made the following report:

1st prize, for best writer and most improvement, Miss Bessie Fowler, 2d prize, Wm. R. Whittall, 3d prize, Miss Flora Stebbins. The whole class made a decided improvement.

Steam Fire Engine Meeting.—The adjourned meeting of the citizens which was called at the Common Council rooms this evening to consider the question of steam fire engines, etc., is now called at the Court Room in consequence with the call of the Mayor. We hope that the meeting will be a large one and this matter is one that interests all. Prompt action is necessary, lest we regret the folly of inaction in the light of a burning city. The Court Room should be full to the overflow.

Before The Footlights.

Miss Janet Beecher, a protegee of Mrs. Kirk La Shelle, is playing the part of Gertrude Lacy, in "The Hair to the Hoorah," this season. Miss Beecher is a very pretty girl, who was known in Chicago society as Miss Meyersburg. She entered upon her professional career with the late Mr. La Shelle, in his production of "The Education of Mr. Pipp," playing one of the "Gibson Girls."

The Askin-Singer company proposes to present at the Myers Theatre on Jan. 25 the latest Chicago musical success, entitled "The Time, The Place and the Girl." This attraction has been the feature of Chicago theatricals for six months, since the beginning of its engagement, and it is likely to remain in that pleasant situation for as much longer as its managers care to have it. Frank R. Adams and Will M. Hough are the authors of its book, and Joseph E. Howard of its music. The leading character in the play is that of Rappy Johnny Hicks, played with rare ability by Arthur Deacon—a square young gambler, good-hearted and honorable, and blessed with take the blame for the escapade—else his love chase will be futile. Hicks does this and then learns that the injured man is brother to Molly Kelly, the head nurse, and the apple of his eye.

Arthur Deacon
The Time, The Place and the Girl

The chief charm of the play is found in the two characterizations of Molly Kelly and Johnny Hicks. Both of them are unusual to stage conventionality, and their colloquies, bristling with smart, epigrammatic slang, are to be classed among the most legitimately funny incidents of musical comedy. There are ten attractive musical numbers in Mr. Howard's score, all of them what the popular song public terms "hits." They have had the sanction of every concert band and cafe orchestra in Chicago for the past six months.

The chorus is one of the most attractive clusters of amiable beauties which the La Salle Theatre has sent out to the waiting world. It was drilled and drilled well by Ned Warren, for whose work it may be said that it is strikingly original and never obtrusive.

BUSINESS IS IRREGULAR

TEMPERATURE AND SNOW
BLOCKADES HAVE EFFECT.

Manufacturing Returns Are Most Favorable, Contracts Covering Deliveries Far Ahead.

New York, Jan. 19.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Trade in winter fabrics improved as the weather became more seasonable, but reports for the week are most irregular on account of varying temperature. Improvement in the traffic situation was checked by snow blockades, and the best railway authorities state that expanding needs of the nation can only be met by a much greater expenditure for new track and rolling stock than has yet been contemplated, although prices of stocks have declined sharply since the announcement of proposed new issues of securities for these purposes.

Clearance sales have made good progress, and new business for spring delivery is coming to jobbers and wholesale houses in large volume, while collections show some improvement, although still slow in many lines. Manufacturing returns could not well be more favorable, contracts in many cases covering deliveries into 1908, while at some steel and cotton mills orders are not accepted for shipment during the first half of 1907. A few labor disputes are in progress, but most wage earners are fully employed and several liberal advances in pay were announced during the week in prominent industries.

Commodity prices have moved irregularly. Wheat advanced on reports of small interior arrivals but reacted as the Argentine crop estimates increase. Corn had the support of statements that excessive moisture was affecting the quality, but shipments increased and exports continued most unsatisfactory, although larger foreign sales promised a better movement later. Northwestern flour mills have increased production until there appears an increase over last year's figures, but shipments abroad are unsatisfactory.

Liabilities of commercial failures thus far reported for January, amounted to $5,230,345, of which $2,333,918 were in manufacturing, $2,530,900 in trading and $305,627 in other commercial lines.

Bradstreet's says: Retail and wholesale trade, industry and transportation alike feel the effect of varying adverse weather conditions, which retard or check activity and make the congestion visible some time ago in railroad matters even more acute. The entire northwest has struggled with a series of snowstorms, followed by intensely cold weather; the central west and southern states have had weeks of heavy rains, culminating in swollen rivers and impassable country roads, while at the south the complaint has been that the weather has been unseasonably warm, and lower temperatures are necessary for fullest activity. In the northwest coal trains have had the tight of way, and grain movement has been light, one result being firmer prices for wheat; while bad weather has been damaging to corn and oats has stimulated prices of coarse grains.

Bill to Prevent Tipping.
Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 19.—A bill was introduced in the senate Friday by the judiciary committee designed to prevent the practice of tipping and making persons or corporations employing waiters or servants who may demand or accept a tip guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine.

That our American forests abound in plants which possess the most valuable medicinal virtues is abundantly attested by scores of the most eminent medical writers and teachers. Even the untutored Indians had discovered the usefulness of many native plants before the advent of the white race. This information imparted freely to the person of the nation to continue investigations until to-day we have a rich assortment of most valuable American medicinal roots.

Dr. Pierce believes that our American forests abound in most valuable medicinal roots for the cure of most obstinate and fatal diseases. If we would properly investigate them; end in the making of this conviction, he points with pride to the almost marvellous cures effected by his "Golden Medical Discovery," which has proven itself to be the most efficient stomach tonic, liver invigorator, heart tonic and regulation and blood purifier known to medical science. Dyspepsia, indigestion, torpid liver, functional and even valvular and other affections of the heart yield to its curative action. The reason why it cures these and many other ailments, is clearly shown in a book of extracts from the standard medical works, which is mailed free to any address by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., to all sending request for the same.

Not less marvellous, in the unparalleled cures it is constantly making of woman's many peculiar affections, weaknesses and distressing derangements, is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, as is amply attested by thousands of published testimonials contributed by grateful patients who have been cured by it of catarrh of the bladder, gonorrhea, leucorrhoea, profluvium, and other ailments caused by weakness, ulceration of uterus and kindred affections, often after many other advertised medicines and physicians had failed.

Both the above mentioned medicines are wisely made up from the purest extracts of rare medicinal roots. The processes employed in their manufacture were original with Dr. Pierce, and they are carried on by skillful chemists and pharmacists with all the latest apparatus and appliances specially designed and built for this purpose. Both medicines are entirely free from alcohol and all other harmful, habit-forming drugs. A full list of their ingredients is printed on each bottle wrapper.

WISCONSIN WEATHER FORECAST

Clearing and colder tonight, Sunday fair and decidedly colder.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT

"We happened at a home the other night and over the parlor door saw the legend worked in letters of gold: 'What Is Home Without a Mother?' Across the room was another brief 'God Bless Our Home.' These mottoes will be found in many homes, worked by nimble fingers, and expressive of the love and devotion felt by the members of the household for the holiest and happiest of earth's blessings, 'mother' and 'home.' 'Home, home—sweet home; be it ever so humble there's no place like home.' But there is another factor in the blessedness of home that is too often forgotten or at least sometimes not fully appreciated, and that factor is 'dad'.

"We want to preach a little sermon in 'dad's' behalf. It is no disparagement to 'mother' to say that, alongside the legend referred to above, this other word be appropriate: 'God Bless Our Dad'.

"Dad gets up early, lights the fire, boils an egg, grabs a dinner pail, and wipes off the dew of the dawn while many a mother is sleeping. He makes the weekly handout to the butcher, the grocer, the milkman and baker, and his little pile is badly worn before he has been home an hour. He stands off the ballist and keeps the rent paid up. If there is a noise during the night 'dad' is nudged in the back and made to get down stairs to find the burglar and kill him. Mother darns the socks, but 'dad' buys them in the first place, and the needles and the yarn afterward. Mother does up the fruit well, but 'dad' buys it all, and jars and sugar coats like mischief.

"Dad buys chickens for Sunday dinner, carves them himself, and draws a neck from the ruins after the rest are served. 'What is home without a mother?'—Yes, that is all right. But—'What is home without a father?' Ten chances to one it is a boarding house; father is under a slab and the landlord is a widow.

"Dad, here's to you. You have your faults—you may have lots of faults—but we will miss you when you are gone.

"Yes, dear, old unappreciated 'dad'! The legend ought to grace the walls of a cottage or a palace in your home wherever you appear. You may tread the pathway of life bearing its burdens ungrudgingly and cheerfully, and go down to the grave unhonored and unsung in framed legends, but you will be missed and mourned nevertheless in cold, gray days when you can no longer answer the call for your services, and will receive your reward on the other shore. Dear old 'dad'. God bless 'dad'!

This little preachment, from an exchange, has to do with a personage so rarely exploited, that it is worth reproducing—and considering. Every complete family, where children come to bless the home, is a triple alliance. When the first baby comes, the circle of love is enlarged; to take the little stranger in, and as others follow, the mother receives congratulations, while the father continues to pass around cigars, of uncertain vintage, to his friends in general, and the press in particular, for recording the happy event.

The responsibility of the new father has commenced, and he assumes it with dignity and courage, and if the heir is of the right persuasion, plans, reaching on into the future, are laid out for the little lad, long before he is out of the kindergarten.

If the circle enlarges, until energy is taxed to the utmost in the struggle for existence, but little time is left for planning, yet the fatherly solicitude continues keeping pace with the mother love, and there comes to the man in mature life a feeling of satisfaction when the boys and girls, who contributed so largely to the joy of the old home, are safely launched on the voyage of life.

The home is the mother's world, while the great outside realm, where victories are won and failures recorded, is the father's arena. The one is so closely entwined that it becomes a sacred precinct, while the other is a battleground which taxes energy and endurance to the limit.

Roses and sentiment, laughter and music, love and happiness, are the natural endowments of the ideal home; and in this congenial atmosphere the best in womanhood develops. The mother, thus envied, has been the subject of song and story since the day when the shepherd's pail homage at the manger in Bethlehem. From a home like this the father gains strength and inspiration for the conflict, in the field where sentiment is a stranger and where the only law which governs is the survival of the fittest.

He offers no complaint and asks for no sympathy; if a winner in the fight the struggle is never counted, however severe it may be. There are many heroes in the homes, but the heroes outside, in the thick of the fray, contribute largely to the laurels.

Much could be said about the goodness of the average father. He is good and the children know it, but they sometimes forget to say anything about it. He is the 'old man' long before the failure of mental and physical faculties develops, and his cash surplus is in a liberal demand, from the day of the first pair of skates until a few years after graduation, and this is sometimes followed by the skidoo problem as to what there will be left to divide, and how long it ought to take him to declare a dividend.

The boy draws on the mother's love and the father's pocketbook. The former is always inexhaustible, and the latter frequently exhausted. The mother receives the credit to which she is entitled; the father gets the kicks, for which he ought to be grateful. 'It's an awfully nice thing to be a mother,' so people say who have tried it. There's a variety of opinion, as to the question, in the ranks of fathers. Responsibility for the coming generation rests upon both, and the age is so rapid that it is difficult to keep up a running acquaintance with our own children.

Of course nobody ever had children just like ours. The Lord never intended they should. If there is only one in the family, the mother thinks him 'the sweetest boy that ever was,' yet she would need a tag to identify him if mixed up with a dozen others. When he gets out on the street with the boys, he is a little the brightest that ever happened. He knows it for mother told him so. The neighbors are of a different opinion, but the neighbors are prejudiced.

When he graduates on the varsity eleven, and whoops it up from Minnesota to Yale, the echo cheers the heart of the mother like a lullaby, while the 'old man' saws wood and thinks. The mother is happy, and the father has paid the bills so long that he has ceased to complain.

The trouble with a multitude of fathers is, that they don't know their boys half as well as their neighbors do, across the street.

There are more orphans, at large today, with two able-bodied parents living, than at any time in the history of the country, and the home is not altogether responsible.

Among the fads, which are being carried to extremes, just now, one of the most pernicious is the much discussed child labor law. It is all right when applied to children, but the only way you can make a child of a boy when he is 15 years and 11 months old, is to keep him in knickerbockers, and corral him in the backyard.

The average father is credited with some common sense, and he is wise enough to know that it never pays to compel a boy to go to school after he is 14. When that age is reached he is old enough to reason, and if he can't be convinced by argument and parental solicitude, the place for him is at work.

The truant officer may chase him around the block, for a couple of years, and think he is educating him. So he is, for the slums and all sorts of vice.

This is the experience in every large city, where an army of boys are kept from work by law until they become common loafers well on the road to crime.

Where these conditions prevail, and they are not the exception, the boy becomes an alien, and the influence of the father is nil, at a time in the boy's life when he needs protection more than at any other period.

"God bless our home," is a choice sentiment but in these days of crazy reform there should be added this line, "And give the fathers a chance."

GODD ROADS

An old farmer, living six miles from Milton, was in town, the other day, and said, in answer to the question, 'How's the roads?' 'The worst I ever saw.' Then he continued, 'A neighbor came over last week and asked me to help him draw his tobacco to Milton.'

"So I hitched up a team, after dinner, loaded up and we started out. Say, talk about roads, we was three hours driving six miles. I lamed a horse and was so lame myself that when I got unloaded I went to bed and stayed there until the next morning, six miles from home, but couldn't get back; the roads are awful."

Some one suggested that he must be in favor of good road building, after his experience, and then he said: "Oh, no; we have good gravel roads around Milton."

It may be remembered that Ezra Goodrich, of the same town, contributed an article to the Gazette on good roads, some little time ago, in which he claimed that the gravel roads around Milton were good, and that state supervision in road building was unnecessary.

The weather for the past six weeks has not been favorable to good roads, but more or less of this kind of weather prevails throughout the year. There has been no snow to interfere; the roads have simply been bad because not properly built.

There hasn't been a day since Thanksgiving when the roads would not have been as good as in the summer, had they been scientifically constructed.

The last number of Collier's gives some full-page illustrations of roads in New York. They are copied from photographs taken of the same stretch of road, before and after being worked under state supervision. The old road is almost impassable, while the new one, 16 feet wide, is as fine as a city boulevard.

The Empire state has appropriated 50 million dollars to spend on country roads during the next 10 years, and the farmers are delighted with results. Land has increased in value and traveling at all seasons is comfortable.

The state legislature, now in session, will make no mistake in starting the movement in Wisconsin. There may be some opposition, but this is not worth considering. The principle is right, and money intelligently invested, always redounds good results.

PRESS COMMENT.

Simon Guggenheim.
Milwaukee News: Colorado is to be represented in the senate by the smelting trust. There is nothing cheap about Colorado.

Is Still Unconvinced.
St. Louis Democrat: Mr. Hearst is again pushing his independence league, regardless of the discovery that it can't elect him even when it swallows the democratic party.

Only $43,000 for Bryan.
Chicago Tribune: Mr. Bryan will receive only $43,000 for the eighty-six lectures he is to deliver this year, but when the people summon their champion to the platform he cannot do less than obey.

Duty of a Wife.
Exchange: Mrs. Wilcox says a wife should put love into every kiss she gives her husband. Quite so, quite so. And also into the bread, the steaks, the soups and the apple sauce.

No Use Borrowing Trouble.
Bryan's Commiserator: Dr. Judson of Chicago University informs us that Mr. Rockefeller represents the type of "the American of tomorrow." Which reminds us that "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

One Discordant Yelp.
El Paso Herald: Prominent republican leaders may be joining a concerted attack on Mr. Roosevelt, but it is safe to say that the concert won't last much longer than the opening scream—it never does.

Lost Trains.
Chicago News: Many trains are lost in the northwest on account of the cold wave. People in that country who see anything of a lost train looking for a warm tunnel into which to crawl should notify Jim Hill as promptly as possible.

Same Charlie Tarried Here Once.
La Crosse Chronicle: Lush, the former editor of The Chronicle who has just retired from a clerkship of the office of secretary of state is residing in Milwaukee for a few weeks before taking up the work of "reform" in the state of Montana, county of Yellowstone and town of Belfry.

Doing Business at Old Stand.
Green Bay Gazette: The Marinette Eagle-Star is probably correct in stating that a paper trust has been in operation for some time. The price of paper went up some time ago and is still advancing. And that is about the best indication that a paper trust is in existence and attending strictly to business.

Not Sore—Just Riled.
Oshkosh Northwestern: The Fond du Lac papers are still wrangling over the dispute as to whether Oshkosh tar macadam pavements are good or bad. Well, to tell the truth, they are not so bad on the whole but they might be worse, and not so good but they might be better. And the Fond du Lac disputants can now figure it out to suit themselves.

Jollying the Cow.
Hoard's Dairyman: Nellie Hawes in the Epitome talks about 'homesick' cows. Every observing farmer has noticed that a cow removed from her home is quite apt to be 'homesick' and did not do as well at the pail as she did in her former home. In our own experience, it is a good thing for the man who milks a cow to spend a few minutes each day on her with the card and brush. Such treatment, with a little gentle petting, will soon bring a cow to her full flow of milk.

It Goes—Drafi! Says So.
Monroe Journal: "It is unlawful to leave fish lines, even if provided with only one hook, unattended and the offender lays himself liable to a heavy fine." Such is a decision upon which a Janesville man paid a fine of $10, and costs for violation of the game laws. The point is thought to be a far fetched one although the fine was made in strict conformity to the laws. It goes without saying that there are many anglers in this country who violate the law in this respect but are not conscious of such violation.

Did Not Reckon With Harriman.
Exchange: When the new Salt Lake road was projected from Los Angeles to Salt Lake City, where it would tap both the Union Pacific and the Gould roads, the people of southern California thought they would have sufficient railroad competition to bring down eastern freight rates. But they did not know Mr. E. H. Harriman of New York. Before the new road was built Mr. Harriman had secured a traffic agreement from it good for ninety-nine years, whereby it agreed to maintain the same freight rates as the Southern Pacific. And the people pay the freight.

That Interurban.
Maison Journal: It is still within the possibilities to secure the building of that Janesville-Madison interurban line this year. If the settlement of the matter so far as this city is concerned is postponed until after the spring election, there is little likelihood of the road being built this season. What is needed is prompt and intelligent action. Those who favor a referendum should understand this: There is no reason in the world, since the subject has been so long and so generally discussed, why the common council may not settle the question at once.

Why Powers Was Shelved.
La Crosse Tribune: For a man who seems to lack all the fundamental elements of tact and discretion, President John T. Powers of the Wisconsin baseball league takes the whole bakery.

Last season Powers succeeded in stirring up resentment among La Crosse fans by his apparent effort to give Freeport a shade the best of all decisions. He is to be judged. He wrote to Freeport complimentary letters concerning La Crosse, its officers and fans, according to the best information. To La Crosse he wrote letters which were certainly uncompromising to Freeport, and which succeeded in stirring up an unnecessary and uncalled for feeling of animosity between Freeport and La Crosse.

President Powers succeeded in antagonizing about all the clubs in the league.

Operations of the C. & N. W.
Wall Street Journal: The Chicago & Northwestern is earning a surplus of about $19,000,000 to $20,000,000 per annum or between 19 per cent and 29 per cent on its total common and preferred stock. While the road will have $40,000,000 to spend in the current fiscal year the Chicago terminal will call for probably $11,000,000, according to one authoritative statement and besides there will be a good deal of double-tracking to pay for. There has been a good deal of talk of the Northwestern building to the coast and when $100,000,000 stock was authorized last fall it was believed that the authorization had nothing else in view. There is a strong interest in the Northwestern which does not wholly approve its present policy and if the other side had its say unquestionably big and decisive steps for the future of this company would be taken without delay. President Marvin Hughitt does not favor a coast extension. It is understood that he believes that there are cost lines enough as it is and that when some of the proposed lines are finished there will be too many. The chances are that while President Hughitt is in harness the N. W. will not go to the coast. On the other hand E. H. Harriman is already a very large holder of Northwestern stock and it would not be surprising if in the end Chicago & Northwestern went the way of many other roads, Southern Pacific, St. Paul, Illinois Central, Baltimore & Ohio, etc., etc.

POLITICS AND POLITICIANS.

The Socialist vote of Kansas at the last election fell short of the vote polled two years ago about one-half.

Representative Frank C. Wachter of the Third district of Maryland has announced his candidacy for the republican mayoralty nomination in Baltimore.

The rumor is gaining currency that former Congressman Benjamin F. Shively of Indiana contemplates becoming a candidate for the democratic nomination for vice president of the United States.

Senator La Follette of Wisconsin has formed a law partnership with Alfred T. Rogers of Madison. Mr. Rogers has attended to most of the legal work for Mr. La Follette in recent years and is his trusted adviser.

George L. Sheldon, the new governor of Nebraska, in his inaugural address to the legislature insisted that the promises made to the people respecting the regulation of corporations and various reform measures should be carried out.

Major General Augustus D. Ayling, adjutant general of New Hampshire, has retired after twenty-seven years of continuous service. General Ayling served with distinction in the Civil and Spanish-American wars.

A. W. Merrifield, who in the eighties was a partner of President Roosevelt in the cattle business on the Little Missouri, has been sworn in as United States marshal for the district of Montana, succeeding Colonel C. F. Lloyd.

Caro Sells, who aspired to become the Iowa member of the democratic national committee but was beaten out by Judge Martin J. Wade, has decided to shake the dust of the Hawkeye State from his feet. He has decided to make his future home in Texas.

Edward F. Hamlin for the past thirty years has acted as executive secretary under fourteen governors of Massachusetts, during which time he has not been absent a single day on account of sickness. He was appointed by Governor Rice in 1877, and has served under every governor since that time, being the first person appointed to that position.

The next gubernatorial primary in Louisiana, which will take place a year hence, promises to be one of the most exciting in the history of the state. Among those who are regarded as certain starters in the race are Lieutenant Governor J. Y. Sanders, Theodore Wilkinson, a former congressman and wealthy sugar planter; Gen. Leon Jastremski, a Baton Rouge editor, and George W. Bolton, a banker of Rapides parish.

Malcolm R. Patterson, who took office as governor of Tennessee, is forty-six years old and a native of Alabama. After graduating from Vanderbilt university he was admitted to the bar and practiced law in Memphis. His first public office was that of attorney general of Shelby county, Tenn. In 1901 he was elected to congress from the Tenth district and continued to serve as a representative, until elected governor last fall.

Edwin S. Stuart, who succeeded Governor Pennypacker in Pennsylvania, made his fortune as a book-seller and publisher in Philadelphia. In 1888 he was a delegate to the republican national convention and during the four years beginning in 1891 he served as mayor of Philadelphia. He is one of the trustees of the estate of Stephen Girard, having charge of Girard College.

LOCAL SIGNIFICANCE.

Today marks the centenary of the birth of General Robert E. Lee, leader of the Lost Cause of the Sixties. Magazines and newspapers have related many little tales of the man whose name is revered today through the whole south but there is one, the story of an interview of a Wisconsin surgeon with the famous leader of the Confederate Army, that still remains to be told.

It was after the second battle of Bull Run. The Union forces had been driven back, leaving one of their division hospitals in the hands of the confederate forces. In charge of this hospital was a Wisconsin surgeon who remained voluntarily within the enemy's lines to care for the wounded men in his charge. The surgeons were cut off from all supplies, lacked the necessities, and the surgeon was helpless without them. He resolved to interview the chief of the Confederate forces in their behalf.

He rode towards the headquarters of General Lee, mounted on a fine saddle horse. Meeting "Extra," Billy Smith, a colonel in the Confederate service, he was forced to dismount, had his horse and saddle over to that officer's orderly and continue his way on foot. His pleadings for his horse were of no avail. The Southern officer was adamant and the surgeon saw his animal, his companion since the opening of the struggle, ridden away by a ragged southern orderly.

Without further molestation he reached Lee's headquarters, was ushered into his presence, and made known his errand of mercy. The story of the needs of the Union wounded appealed to the General. He listened attentively, promising to do all in his power for their relief, gave orders immediately that supplies be sent to alleviate the sufferings.

Later the Confederates retreated and the hospital was again in Union lines but the kindness of the Confederate leader was not forgotten. Many a wounded Union soldier owed his life to him and in speaking of his meeting with General Lee the surgeon said: "General Lee inspired me with such reverence I could never have remained in his presence with covered head."

This is but one of the many tales told of the southern leader that go to show the greatness of the man whose centenary is today celebrated throughout the South. The surgeon belonged to a Wisconsin regiment, veterans of which live in this city, and it is possible that some old soldier in Janesville was in the hospital at the time of its capture.

TELEPHONE MEN HAD PLEASANT MEETING

Independent Magnates Gathered in Madison During the Past to Discuss Matters.

The annual convention of the Wisconsin Independent Telephone association just closed at Madison had a large and enthusiastic attendance of delegates from nearly all parts of the state, and a number of prominent telephone men from other states were also present. Mr. H. D. Critchfield, president of the new Milwaukee independent Telephone Co., stated to the meeting that their solicitors were bringing in contracts for phones from Milwaukee people at the rate of about 150 per day, and that the exchange on its opening would be much larger than they had anticipated. Over a thousand miles of the finest copper toll lines will be immediately constructed to connect exchanges in the interior of the state, including Madison, Janesville, Beloit and other toll lines with Milwaukee, and telephone connection for independents with Chicago seems also assured. Plans outlined by President Richard Valentine for complete organization of the independent companies in the state according to congressional districts were perfected, and $1000 was subscribed for the attendant expenses in a few minutes. Besides many addresses by delegates from different portions of the state there was much testimony to the extent and astonishing progress in other states of the independent telephone movement. Mr. J. B. Ware of Grand Rapids, Michigan, who is secretary of an independent telephone company there which has 80,000 telephones in western and northern Michigan, gave an interesting account of their progress and the problems they had mastered. Mr. S. E. Nale of St. Paul of the Tri-State Independent company there gave an interesting account of the rapid spread of their business and toll lines, and of their agreement with the Manitoba government, which has just adopted a government independent system for the province, to build toll lines to the American boundary to connect with them in the spring. All the speakers stated facts showing gratifying success in the telephone business and much enthusiasm. The Madison Forty Thousand club invited all the delegates and visitors from abroad to a banquet in the evening at the close of the convention. About 150 were present to enjoy the spread, upon which no expense had been spared either for the feast itself or for flowers and music and other accessories. Addresses were made by Mayor Schubert of Madison, ex-Mayor Groves, president of the club, and by Mr. J. B. Hoge of Cleveland, president of the National Ind. Tel. association, on the Needs of an Association; by F. C. Grant of Janesville, on Natural Monopolies in Telephones; by Mr. C. S. Norton of Indianapolis, on The Rights of Membership, and there were many impromptu speeches and good stories from others. The banquet dispersed at a late hour, and the telephone men all report a most profitable and successful convention and an excellent time.

BASE BALL PROSPECT OF COMING SEASON

Janesville May Be in the Trolley League—Word Emanates from Rockford.

Rockford papers are boosting the establishment of a Trolley Baseball League to be composed of Rockford, Beloit, Streator, Elgin, Aurora and Janesville teams. Rockford refused a franchise in the Wisconsin state league and the Forest City magnates are now striving to stir up enthusiasm for the Trolley league plan. Local baseball men profess to know nothing definite of the project, but think that such a league with easy expenses, short jumps and a fair patronage might be made to pay. Whether the Eagles will have another team this coming year yet remains a question. While fair support was given the organization last summer it was not a money making year and it is a question if another team takes the field this coming summer.

LEADER FELT SAFE IN HIS SELECTION

Social Union Management Leave Program to the Leader of the Evening.

The management of the Social Union club is feeling a little hurt over the criticism brought out, because of the socialistic talk given at the last meeting, by the young disciple from the university.

It is due the club to say that the leaders select speakers for the various meetings and Mr. Hemmingsway doubtless felt safe in calling on a product of the state school. The topic assigned him, however, was critical, and the speaker took advantage of it, by airing his pernicious faith.

About half of the audience had retired before he commenced to orate, and his doctrine, while plausible on the face, failed to find endorsement. The American boy has no time for socialism. It may take him a few years to get his bearings after he gets out of college but he usually lands on his feet in spite of a lot of theoretical nonsense instilled into his mind under the high-sounding title "political economy."

Is Very Sick: Mrs. Scott Smith who lives in the town of La Prairie is very ill and her recovery doubtful.

CHAPTER XVIII.

HERE was a mystery about the captain's visits to the big house. Up to the beginning of that week he had called on Tuesday and Friday evenings only and had remained until after 10 o'clock, joking, laughing and apparently enjoying himself. But now he came every night and seemed less talkative and more grim each time; also his calls grew shorter, and he went home as early as half past 8. The sisters did not know what to make of it. It was pleasant and encouraging to have him come so often, but why didn't he stay longer? Miss Tempy thought he must be worrying over the big contract.

She asked Clara for her opinion, but Miss Hopkins seemed very indifferent. She used to come into the sitting room as soon as the work was done to listen to Captain Titcomb's stories, but of late she had gone straight to her own room. The old maids did not urge her to remain. They liked to have the captain to themselves.

On the afternoon of the previous Sunday Miss Tempy had taken a sudden notion to go over to the Methodist chapel and attend the Sabbath school concert. The chapel was on the road to Orham Port, a mile or more from the Allen home. Miss Prissy was not strong enough to go and, in fact, thought the walk too long for her delicate sister, but Miss Tempy, having made up her mind, went. She would have been glad of Clara's company, but the young lady had already gone out.

Miss Tempy had just reached the corner when she was surprised to see Captain Titcomb driving toward her in a buggy. She recognized the horse and carriage as being the best owned by Lem Mullett, the livery stable keeper; also she noticed that the captain looked particularly well dressed—spruced up, she told Miss Prissy afterward.

"Cap'n!" she called. "Cap'n Ezra!" The captain was then almost directly opposite, but he did not seem to hear or see her. Instead he whipped up the horse and drove by faster than ever.

"Dear me!" thought Miss Tempy. "He must be getting somewhat. Workin' too hard, I guess. Cap'n Ezra!"

It is doubtful if the captain would have heard even then, but Jonathan Wixon was coming down the road, and he also began to shout. "Hailed thus, 'fore and aft,' the absentminded one was obliged to leave to, and when Captain Jonathan pouted out and Miss Tempy he turned his horse and drove back to where she was standing.

"Well, I do declare!" exclaimed the lady, smilingly conscious of a becoming new bonnet—one of the reasons for her desire to attend the concert. "I'm all out of breath callin' after you. I don't know what folks will think!"

The captain didn't appear to care very much what folks might think. He was polite as usual, but seemed to be a trifle nervous, and kept glancing up and down the road. Miss Tempy, unconscious of the nervousness, went gushingly on.

"What a lovely horse!" she cried. "I declare, it must be a pleasure to ride behind him. I do so like to ride with a nice, gentle horse like that. Father used to take Prissy and me drivin' with our Dexter when he was alive—father was alive, I mean—yes, and the horse, too, of course. I hope I haven't kept you. Was you goin' to see Bradley?"

"No, no," was the hasty answer. "I was jest—jest drivin' down the road a ways." Then, perhaps noticing that his friend was headed toward the village, he added: "I had a little errand down toward the Port. You're goin' uptown, I see, else I'd ask you to jump in."

"Why, how lovely!" exclaimed Miss Tempy. "I was goin' to the Port, too—down to the Methodist folks' concert. I only came this way 'cause I thought I'd stop at Mrs. Wingate's and see if she wouldn't go with me. Prissy was afraid the walk there and back would be too long for me, and, truth to tell, I was a little afraid of it myself. I didn't expect to ride, and with you, Cap'n Ezra! It'll be such a treat, because I shall feel perfectly safe with you drivin'."

The captain did not answer immediately. He was busy with the buckle that fastened the reins together. But the silence was only momentary.

"Good enough!" he cried. "I'll have you there in a jiffy."

He sprang out, assisted the lady into the buggy and then turned the horse's head into the road leading up the hill.

"Why, you're goin' the wrong way," Miss Tempy exclaimed. "You're goin' the wrong way, Cap'n Ezra!"

"Oh," replied the captain cheerfully, "that's all right! I thought we'd go round by the Neck road. It's prettier that way."

But Miss Tempy would not consent. She told Miss Prissy afterward, "I felt as though I'd the same as begged him for a ride as it was, and I swan if I was goin' to let him go miles out of his way jest for me."

"No," she protested. "No, cap'n, I won't hear of it. We'll go the shortest road or I shall git right out."

She stood up as she said it. The captain looked at her determined face.

"Why, Tempy?" he began.

"No, I shan't like it a bit, Cap'n Titcomb, if you don't turn right round and go the way you want."

The captain jerked at the reins with almost unnecessary vigor. The turn was made in a hurry. They wheeled back into the direct road to the Port and moved swiftly along it. Captain Titcomb did not say much, but as Miss Tempy talked continuously he had little opportunity.

"Now nice the horse does go!" commented the lady. "You don't have to duck to him or nothin'. Father used to find so much fault with our Dexter, said he had to shove on the reins so hard to make him navigate at all that he didn't know's 't wouldn't be easier to haul the carryall himself. But, then, father was so high spirited that nothin' less 'n a race horse would do him. What's that waitin' on the corner in front of Gains Eldridge's? Vay, I do believe it's Clara!"

Captain Titcomb evidently did not see Miss Hopkins. At all events he looked the other way and chirruped to the horse. But Miss Tempy not only saw, but intended to be seen.

"It is Clara," she declared. "I must speak to her, Clara! Clara!"

The young lady, who had been intently watching the approaching buggy, stepped to the edge of the sidewalk and waited until the equipage drew up. She was dressed in her new gown and jacket and certainly looked very pretty. She nodded to the captain, whose face was redder than usual.

"How d'ye do, Clara?" said Miss Tempy, trying hard not to be patronizing. "I s'pose you're takin' a walk. You look real nice. Where are you goin'?"

Miss Hopkins replied that she didn't know just where she should go.

"Well, I hope you'll have a pleasant afternoon wherever you go," gushed Miss Tempy. "The cap'n is takin' me for a little drive. Isn't this a beautiful horse?"

Here the captain made his first remark since the carriage stopped. It was to the effect that he was taking Miss Tempy down to the Methodist chapel. She had been going that way, and it was a long walk.

"Oh," said Miss Hopkins sweetly, "is that all? I thought perhaps you were going to take her over to Harriett. It seems as if I remembered you saying you expected to go there today. Good-by. I hope you'll have a nice time."

On that evening Captain Titcomb made the first of the short calls which were to continue during the week. Miss Tempy welcomed him enthusiastically, and her sister did her best not to appear jealous. Clara did not come into the sitting room at all, nor did she do so during the following four evenings.

Bradley did not mention the trouble aboard the Diving Belle when he reached home Friday night. He was even more silent than usual at the supper table. When the meal was over he suddenly exclaimed: "By George, Clara, I must beg your pardon! There was a letter for you in our box this morning, and I left it aboard the schooner. I'll bring it home tomorrow."

Captain Titcomb came about 8. He seemed really cheerful when he first arrived, but soon relaxed into the moody silence that had characterized his visits that week.

"Clara out in the kitchen?" he asked after awhile. "I noticed the light was burnin'."

"No," replied Miss Tempy; "she's up in her room. She's left some bread to rise, and I guess she's comin' down to see it by and by. That's why she left the lamp, I s'pose likely."

As the big clock in the dining room struck 9 the captain rose, announced that he must be going and went. Bradley retired soon after, and the sisters followed his example. The old house grew still. Miss Prissy was dropping into a comfortable doze when she felt herself clutched violently by the back hair.

"Ow!" she exclaimed, half awake. "Let go! What on earth?"

"S-s-s-h!" Miss Tempy breathed it frantically into her ear. "Don't speak!"

"I won't if you let go of my hair. What's the matter—nightmare? I told you there was a limit, even to pepper tea."

"Oh, do be still! There's robbers downstairs, I heard 'em."

Miss Prissy groaningly sat up and listened. "It's Clara seen' to her bread," she said after a moment.

"It ain't Clara's in her room readin'!" I saw her through the crack in the door. And Bradley's in his room. I heard him breathin'. Please git up!"

Miss Prissy said no more. She donned a wrapper and put on her slippers. Her sister was already similarly garbed. Then, Miss Prissy bearing the lamp, they tiptoed into the hall and on to the door of Bradley's room.

"Bradley," cautiously whispered Miss Prissy, "Bradley, will you git up, please? Tempy thinks there's some body downstairs."

They heard Bradley chuckle sleepily. In a few moments he came out, dressed in jacket and trousers and blinking at the lamp. Clara, who had not gone to bed, had already joined them.

The procession moved—Bradley first, then Miss Prissy with the lamp, then Miss Tempy, who, as she said afterward, was "too scared to go ahead and wasn't go last." Clara brought up the rear. They peered cautiously into the dining room. It was empty.

"There," exclaimed Miss Prissy. "I guess 'twas nothin' but Tempy's imagination, as usual. She—"

The words died on her lips. There came a sound from the kitchen—they all heard it—a rattling sound and the faint squeak of a door.

Bradley sprang to the coal bed and picked up the poker. It was the only apology for a weapon in sight. He started for the kitchen, but Miss Prissy seized him by the jacket and Miss Tempy threw both arms around his neck.

"Don't you stir, Bradley Nickerson," whispered the older sister. "Don't you stir a step! S'pose he had a revolver!"

Bradley tried to free himself, but it was hard work. He unclasped Miss Tempy's arms from his neck, but she immediately seized him around the waist. It was a ridiculous situation, and suddenly he became aware of a cold wind blowing from the direction of the front hall.

"Is that front door open?" he whispered.

The horrified sisters turned to stare at the black tunnel of the hall, and then footfalls were heard on the walk, coming up the steps. Clara's voice became audible. She was speaking in agonized whispers.

"Who?" began Bradley.

Clara appeared, clinging to the arm of Captain Erl Hedge. Captain Erl looked puzzled, but he grinned when he saw the tableau in the dining room.

He told the story the next morning to his messmates, Captain Perez and Captain Jerry, about as follows:

"You see, I'd been up to lodge meetin' and stayed a little longer'n usual. I was comin' home by the short cut and jest as I got abreast the old maids' house the front door bust open, and somethin' comes prancin' down the walk fluttin' and flappin' its arms like a hen tryin' to fly. Thinks I, 'Has that spiritulist camp meetin' I went to last summer struck in?'

"But the critter swooped out of the gate and bore down on me like a hawk on a June bug. Then I see 'twas Clara Hopkins, scart pretty nigh to death."

"Oh, Cap'n Erl!" says she. "Oh, Cap'n Erl!"

"The same," says I. "What's the row?"

"'Burglars!' says she, makin' fast to my arm. 'Burglars!'

"I had to laugh. I couldn't help it. 'Burglars at 10 o'clock?' I says. 'Did they come to supper?'

"'But they're there!' she says. 'Everybody heard 'em, Bradley and all. 'I couldn't believe 'twas burglars even then, but I knew if Brad Nickerson took any stock in it somethin' was up. And the poor girl was tremblin' like Peleg Myrick's pup."

"'All right, Clara,' says I. 'Let's go in and shake hands with 'em.'"

"So in we went. When we struck the dinin' room there was Brad in the middle of the floor lookin' pretty toler'ble foolish, with Prissy moored to his cotrails and Tempy with a cove hitch round his waist. All hands looked surprised to see me, but no more 'n I was to see them. 'What is this?' says I. 'Living statues?'

"'Brad, he kind of grinned. 'Well,' says he, 'the ladies thought they heard some one in the kitchen, but I guess—' 'Thought we heard 'em!' busts out Prissy. 'Why, you heard 'em yourself!'

"And how Brad, he held up his hands, poker and all. 'All right, all right,' says he. 'Now that we're re-enforced maybe we'd better go out and interview 'em. They might die of old age if we stay here much longer.'"

"So he winked to me and the feet got under way. Me and Brad, led off like a couple of tugs, and the women folks strung out behind, like coal barges, holdin' on to each other's wrappers and breathin' hard."

"We opened the kitchen door and sailed in—that is, Brad and I did. The coal barges got in a lump, so's to speak, in the doorway and stayed there. There was a lamp burnin' side of a pan of dough on the table, but, jest as I expected, we was the only humans in sight."

"Looks as if the burglars had got tired of waitin' for us and got mad and gone home," says I. "Don't know what they broke into the kitchen for, anyhow. I've heard of a feller's stealin' a red-hot stove, but—"

"Brad looked puzzled, sort of. 'I sartinly heard somethin' movin' out here,' he says. 'Most likely 'twas a stray cat, and it's hidin' around some-where.'"

"But jest then comes a whistle—a squeal, I mean—from the barges. Tempy's headlits were poppin' out of her head, and she was plintin' a shuky finger at the floor. There was big muddy footprints all over it."

"Well, I own up I was set back two or three rows. Somebody had been there, that was sartin. I've seen cats with double paws, but no cats made them prints."

"'Humph!' says I, and Brad agreed with me."

"I was standin' right in front of the door of the closet where the old maids kept their pots and pans. And jest then inside that closet bust out the most outrageous racket ever you heard. Biffy, bang, thump! And then a coughin' and sneezin' like forty packs of thunder crackers."

"I ain't a nervous man, g'n'rally speakin', but I got up and moved sudden. I didn't exactly run, but I kind of glided over to the sink. Leastways I was backed up against it when I remembered to take an observation. The women grabbed each other and screeched. Brad, he turned sort of yellor round the gills, but he was the coolest one in the bunch."

OF PUBLIC FUNCTIONS

Some Things Are Essentially of a Governmental Nature.

Collecting Customs, Maintaining the Army and the Police, Are Among These, but Not Such Undertakings as the Telegraph, the Telephone, the Street Cars or Gas and Electric Lighting—True Nature of a Public Franchise.

By ARTHUR WILLIAMS,
President National Electric Light association.

Some things are so essentially of a governmental nature that it would be fatuous to consider them from the standpoint of private ownership. Among these are the collection of customs, the maintenance and direction of the army and navy and the police power. In others it is the end rather than the means that should be sought, and municipal and private ownership are often on equal terms without the violation of any economic principle.

The maintenance of public highways and sewers is usually a public function, but the country abounds in examples, every whit as satisfactory, of private ownership and operation. With water the importance to the community lies not in its ownership, whether public or private, but rather in its quality, quantity and price. Many of the most satisfactory waterworks of this country and Europe are owned privately.

Beyond these there is a class of public utilities which experience has shown should lie exclusively within the domain of private enterprise. The telephone, telephone, transportation, gas and electric light undertakings offer examples. The ownership of these by the community is advocated by some on the ground that they are necessities of modern life, by others because they partake of the nature of monopoly. It does not appear that either is a sufficient reason. These are facilities and conveniences, not necessities. The latter consist of simple dwellings, food, raiment and means of warmth in winter. If our necessities are to be municipalized, we should begin with the butcher, grocer, baker and coal dealer, whose percentage of profits far exceeds that of any of the corporations in the so called public service.

Monopoly—regulated monopoly—is not necessarily opposed to the public interest. It is advantageous to all to have one telephone system, that from one point all may be conveniently reached; to have one street car system with universal transfers, making unnecessary any relation between one's home and place of work; to have a single gas or electric light works, preventing the waste of small plants and organizations and securing by the larger development increased reliability and improved quality in the service.

A franchise merely permits a public service corporation to share with others the use of the streets for the delivery to its customers of the commodity it supplies—a right that is enjoyed by every other industry. The difference is merely one of method. Were electricity delivered in storage batteries and gas in tanks—conceivable ways—no franchise would be required. Instead of using horses and wagons, which blockade the streets and make street cleaning a problem, deliveries are made beneath the surface without dirt, noise or other objectionable features.

It is through the exercise of this right that we hear of the confiscation of public property. Yet the public has not parted with its title to the streets nor its right to occupy them for any purpose or in any manner it may desire. It has simply permitted a service company to become a tenant, for which, in the form of franchise and other taxes, the company pays a high rent. Substantially the city is the landlord, possessing the power of arbitrarily determining, in the form of these taxes, what rent it shall receive. And this rent lessens proportionately the individual taxation.—Moody's Magazine.

Typical Case of City Bookkeeping.
The authorities of Lakewood, O., have charged the city $55 a year for the street lights supplied by the municipal plant. After looking at their tax bills some of the citizens came to the conclusion that this sum did not represent all the cost and called in a firm of expert accountants, who ascertained that the actual annual cost per arc had been $120.56 for the seven years the plant had been in operation, although the lights had been run on the moonlight schedule. As a private company offers all night service for less than half that amount, the experiment is not regarded as a success, except by the lighting committee.

Hard Luck of English City Strikers.
The experience of the employees of the municipal street railway of Halifax, England, is not such as to encourage the idea, promulgated by our yellow journals, that cities are necessarily an easy mark. These employees struck, expecting popular support, which was not forthcoming. Their places were promptly filled, arbitration was refused, and the new men were retained when the strike was over.

Greenfield, Ind.
The city council is considering the necessity for a general overhauling and installation of new machinery in the municipal electric light plant in this city. Frequent breakdowns recently have left the city in darkness.—Electrical World.

Uncle Allen.
"Lots of men," said Uncle Allen Sparks, "are working hard to go to Heaven because they think they won't have to do any work when they get there."

REVERSED BY THE PEOPLE.

English Voters Call a Halt as to Municipal Ownership.

The most dramatic incident in the history of municipal government occurred on Nov. 1, when the greatest city in the world reversed its policy in regard to municipal ownership by an overwhelming vote. For several years the "Progressives," as the municipal ownership party called itself, have controlled the London county council, which has charge of most matters affecting the city as a whole, and of seventeen of the twenty-eight borough councils, which deal with local matters, one borough being nonpartisan. After the borough council election on Nov. 1 this party was left in control of but two boroughs, having elected with their allies, the so called "Laborites," only 292 councilmen out of 1,362. That it was a popular and not a class victory is shown by the fact that the "Progressives" were beaten worst in the boroughs where the heaviest vote was cast.

Such a political upheaval must have an adequate cause, and the cause in the case was the rapid increase in taxes, and consequently rents, which resulted from the taking over by the city or its boroughs of tramways, electric lighting, waterworks, etc., the building of luxurious public baths and other expenditures of public money out of all proportion to the results attained. This lavishness had raised the borough tax rate in the boroughs controlled by the "Progressives" 40 per cent above the rate in the other boroughs. A few examples of the losses incurred may be of interest.

In Islington the street lighting costs nearly three times as much per mile as in the boroughs lighted by private companies. In St. Pancras the cost is nearly as high, while in Woolwich, in spite of the high cost, the loss for the current year is expected to reach $50,000. In Bermondsey and Southwark the councils have refused an offer from a private company to light the streets at half the cost under municipal management. The same condition exists in commercial lighting, for the Aerated Bread company found that the bills for its depots in municipally lighted boroughs were 116 per cent higher than the rate paid to private companies.

In Shoreham the palatial public baths, built within a stone's throw of a bath erected by a local philanthropist, are now closed for lack of custom, though interest must still be paid on the investment and the borough has lost the taxes previously paid by the property. And in Poplar each bath taken in the public baths costs the taxpayers 20 cents in addition to what the bathers pay for their ticket.

In this borough cases were proved in which outdoor relief was given to families earning $500 a year, equivalent to $850 in this country, while the fare in the workhouse was better than could be afforded by the average independent wage earner.

Examples of this sort could be multiplied indefinitely, and the same conditions exist in the work carried on by the London county council, which, for example, is paying 47 per cent more for inferior brickwork than the standard contract price for the best work. The failure of its municipal ferry is typical of its waste of public money, and the county council election to be held next spring is expected to result similarly to the borough council election.

The Pall Mall Gazette sums the situation up by saying:

"You may confiscate capital, but you cannot confiscate that mighty force of self interest which belongs to the great generating station of all human activity. Municipal trading, conducted by amateurs and financed out of an open and bottomless pocket, can never be more than a weak and false imitation of real commerce and industry. If the city council collected its capital by the issue of prospectuses to the public, who would invest a sovereign on the faith of its promises or the reputation of its directing committees? And if the ratepayer is wise he will take care that his money does not find its way by compulsion into speculations where he most assuredly would never place it by choice."

Taxes Rising in Scotland.

Consul Rufus Fleming of Edinburgh calls attention in a recent report to the fact that during the ten years ending 1904 local taxation per capita has increased more than 42 per cent. He further states that taxes are especially high in Glasgow, Aberdeen and Paisley, the three Scotch cities that have gone deepest into municipal ownership, and adds that "the conclusion seems unavoidable that whatever benefits municipal ownership may have bestowed upon the masses, it has not tended to lighten the burdens of taxpayers." This is emphasized by the added fact that during the last fiscal year of the series the running expenses of all of the revenue producing municipal undertakings of Scotland exceeded the receipts by 10 per cent in spite of the ridiculously small depreciation allowance and the transferring to other accounts of large items of expense.

Want to Let Go, but Can't.

Do you remember how you felt the first time you took hold of an electric battery? It felt rather pleasant at first, but as the operator turned on more current it became very unpleasant, and you wanted to let go, but couldn't. That's the way most citizens feel in places where the city does its own lighting. They've got hold of an electric plant and want to let go, but can't.

Bonds for municipal plants increase taxes. Taxes increase the cost of living and of doing business.

MOVE ANNOYING FOR REPUBLICANS

THEY MUST VOTE DOWN THE BLACKBURN AMENDMENT.

ITS AUTHOR STUBBORN

Determined to Force the Issue—Lumber Trust Attacked—House Votes for Higher Salaries for Congressmen.

Washington, Jan. 19.—In the absence of Senator Aldrich, Senator Crane took charge of the forces in the senate Friday in opposition to the Blackburn amendment to the Foraker Brownsville resolution, and by two o'clock he had succeeded in inspiring more confidence than had been felt earlier in the day. He then announced his opinion that a vote would be reached on Monday and that the Blackburn provision would be laid on the table by a practically unanimous Republican vote.

When asked for his version of the situation Senator Blackburn, the author of the amendment, said that he was "standing pat."

Blackburn Is Determined.
"I mean to force the issue as far as I can," he said, "and I do not believe that a fighting man like the president of the United States will oppose an amendment like mine, which is in line with his own course and conviction." He said he had been importuned by the Republicans to withdraw the amendment, but that he had declined to do so because he believed that the president was entitled to this declaration of faith and right, and he added that if the Republicans should vote it down the consequences must be upon their shoulders. He declares that the amendment is an abstract declaration and that it is entirely disconnected with the Brownsville affair.

He repeated his conviction that a practically unanimous Democratic vote would be cast for the amendment, but expressed doubt as to whether a vote would be secured Monday.

Gets After Lumber Trust.

The senate Friday agreed to a resolution directing an investigation of the "lumber trust," and passed a bill increasing the artillery corps of the army.

An address was made by Senator Whyte, of Maryland, in protest against any encroachment by the federal government on the powers of the states.

Senator Kittredge spoke regarding the "lumber trust," declaring there was a combination completely controlling the lumber industry and detailing its methods.

House for Higher Salaries.

By a rising vote of 133 to 92 the house adopted an amendment to the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, which was taken from the speaker's table with senate amendments, increasing the salary of the vice president, the speaker and the members of the cabinet to $12,000 per year and those of senators and representatives, delegates from territories and the resident commissioner from Porto Rico to $7,500 per year, the increases to take effect March 4, 1907.

Effort was made to have a roll call, but only 34 members arose, which was not a sufficient number, so that the house was relieved of the necessity of going on record.

An urgent deficiency bill was passed carrying a total of $344,650.

Attempt to Rob Georgia Bank.

Midville, Ga., Jan. 19.—The Bank of Midville was dynamited early Friday by three robbers, but as the blast failed to wreck the safe no money was taken. Cashier C. W. Powers, who rushed to the scene, was seriously but not fatally wounded by the robbers.

Two Sentenced to Be Hanged.

San Francisco, Jan. 19.—John Stomensen and Louis Dabner, known as the "gas pipe" murderers, were sentenced Friday by Judge Cook to be hanged.

Bad Wreck on the Santa Fe.

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 19.—Santa Fe passenger train No. 4, eastbound, the Chicago Limited, from California, was wrecked Friday night at Hutchinson, Kan., the engine killed, and a number of passengers injured, according to a report that has just reached Topeka.

Box of Gold Bullion Stolen.

San Bernardino, Cal., Jan. 19.—A robber stole a box containing $6,500 in gold bullion bound for the San Francisco mint from an express truck at Barstow early Friday.

BELOIT OLEO CASE WILL BE TRIED HERE

On a Change of Venue from Municipal Court—Test Case Will Probably Go to Supreme Tribunal.

On a change of venue, the action of the State of Wisconsin vs. E. W. Berger of Beloit, which originated in the Line City municipal court, will be tried in the circuit court of Rock county. It is to be a test case and will probably be taken to the supreme court. The state food and dairy commissioners caused the arrest of Berger, a butcher, on the charge of selling oleomargarine the same color as butter. Mr. Berger is being defended by the Oleomargarine Makers' association of Chicago who will fight the Wisconsin law to a finish. A point which will be maintained is that there is no established color for butter, and that oleo is not color adulterated. A representative of a packing house says that it is not unlikely that those who color butter may be arrested before the case is finished.

APPORTIONMENT OF COUNCIL UNJUST?

Wm. Ruger and T. S. Sayles Appeal to Circuit Court from Garfield Avenue Assessments.

William Ruger, who owns lot 2, and T. S. Sayles, who owns lot 4 in block 5, Forest park addition, have filed appeals to the circuit court from the determination of the city council on Dec. 28 last fixing $54.43 and $54.42, respectively, as the amounts to be paid by said real estate as benefits on account of the improvement of that thoroughfare by grading. It is recited in both legal documents that the owners of the property are aggrieved, though the extent of their dissatisfaction is not measured.

KICKERS' KOLUM

Mr. Editor: This is a reasonable, therefore a sensible kick. If there are any people in Janesville who have a kick coming it is that part of the population who use the Academy street railroad crossing. The two railroad companies have taken great care to provide driveways to and around the depots, so that the horses and carriages might have a nice clean and smooth surface to move upon, but when it comes to providing the same for man and woman, that's different. The first warders have been very patient all these years, but there is a time when patience ceases to be a virtue. Let the first ward people ask for a brick crossing and follow it up until it becomes a reality.

A BRICK.

Victor Whiton Goes to Pittsburgh: Victor Whiton who has been spending a few days at the home of his mother, Mrs. Mary L. Whiton, departed this morning for Pittsburgh where he is to assume the duties of assistant head salesman in Pennsylvania for the Wilson Bros. men furnishings establishment. This splendid opening has come to him through connections formed in Chicago where he has been engaged in business for over a year past.

WAS BALD SIX YEARS

Three Months of the New Scientific Treatment Restored His Hair.

Baldness is caused by dandruff, which is caused by a germ. Kill the germ and it is almost certain that hair will grow again, if the follicle has not been totally destroyed. Nels Peterson of Line Spur, Mont., says: "I had been bald six years, and had tried all kinds of cures, but without any benefit whatever until I tried Herpicide. November 16, 1899, I began using Herpicide, and in three months a fine growth of hair covered my head completely." Ask your druggist for Herpicide. Everybody can have luxuriant, glossy hair, if Herpicide is used thoroughly. Take no substitute. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

ELECTRICITY IN THE HOUSEHOLD

Electric Lights are sanitary, as they do not consume the oxygen of the air, and are thereby specially adapted for the room and conservatory.

When properly installed they are absolutely safe in regard to danger of fire. There can be no leaks, no asphyxiation, no explosions, or danger to children; no scratching of matches.

Electric Lights are convenient and clean, require no care, are always ready to burn instantly without needing a new mantle, trimming or the like; and what has made them an absolute necessity, in a great many places, is that they can be lighted or extinguished from distant points while lamps are placed in locations where they are perfectly inaccessible.

Now is a good time to have your house wired at a low figure. May we send our solicitor to see you?
